

SOUTHWEST VIRGINIA NOTES.

The Pittsburg and Southern has lately been incorporated in West Virginia, and will build a line in that State forty-seven miles, from Blacksburg to Clarksburg.

The Ohio River Railroad Company has decided to build a bridge across the Guyandot river and extend its railroad from Guyandot, W. Va., to Kenova, a distance of four miles.

D. F. Geagay and J. M. Miller, the Luray bankers who failed in business last December, were arrested in Newmarket, Va., last week, upon warrants sworn out by various depositories in the bank. They were brought to Luray in custody of Sheriff Chapman and deputies. A preliminary examination was waived, and they were bailed in sums of $20,000 for their appearance at the March court.

Mr. Peter M. Wilson, of Winston, N. C., has closed a big contract with Messrs. Graham Brothers, contractors and builders of Danville, for the building of the Zinzendorf hotel, Winston's new one hundred thousand dollar public house.

J. B. Underwood, Charlottesville, N. C., has scored a signal victory in the invention of the only strictly automatic self-feeding cigarette machine in the world, which has just been tested by an expert and found to be capable of making 150,000 cigarettes per day. The machine is a marvel of simplicity, and destined to revolutionize the cigarette-manufacturing world.

Alexandria is rousing from her century of lethargy and organizing a boom. There is no good reason why Alexandria should not be the commercial and manufacturing center of the Capital of the United States of America. Such a result lies entirely in the hands of her own enterprise, and she is in no wise barred from her full share in the wonderful renaissance which is now everywhere making itself visible and tangible in the Old Dominion. In fact there is no point in Virginia with better facilities for transportation by land and water, none better located as to the great cities of the Atlantic coast, none of greater historical interest, and none of which by its contiguity to the National Capital will make it a more desirable place of residence at the political, social, artistic, scientific and literary center of the country.—Washington Star.

Mr. Ragland, of Bedford City, has decided to remove his cigar manufactory from that city to Farmville.

The lower Chesapeake is fairly alive with whales. They seem to be going up. They have the appearance of sperm whales, and the man who can corral the lot would soon grow rich. Captain Howes, of the steamship Dorchester from Boston, reports three big fellows off Fortress Monroe. They were blowing at a great rate. Nearly every captain arriving the past week, reports having seen the sea monsters throughout the various parts of the bay.

Iron ore has been discovered in large quantities in the Middle Mountains, Hardy and Grant counties, West Virginia, and experts pronounce it of the very richest kind. The Bayard, Petersburg and Moorefield Railroad Company own large tracts of land in these counties, and will commence at once developing it. A charter has been granted the Petersburg Southern Railroad Company to build a broad gauge road into the interior of this State via Mannington, making Clarksburg the terminus for the present, and connecting with the Waynesburg and Washington Railroad in Pennsylvania. It is being built by oil capitalists, who also own large coal lands in this part of the State, and propose making this a competing road with those already built.

A contract has been signed for extending a street railway from the Chesapeake and Ohio depot around the grounds of the University of Virginia, the work to be begun as soon as the weather permits and to be completed in ninety days. This will add greatly to the accommodation of visitors and of those living at the University. The present street railway extends only to the edge of the grounds. The proposed line will give a magnificent opportunity to view the University grounds.

The following graduates of the Waynesboro Military School are now commandants of military schools: Terry, '87, of the Staunton Male Academy, at Staunton, Va.; Wilson, also of '87, of the Suffolk Military Academy, at Suffolk, Va.; Mallory, '89, of the Fishburne Military Academy, at Waynesboro, Va.; Rothenbach and Ford, the first captain and adjutant, respectively, of the same class, have each a battalion under his charge in Missouri; the former in Booneville, and the latter in Lexington; Harden, of '90, is running the military department of the Demopolis Military Academy of Demopolis, Ala., and McCormick, also of '90, is commandant of the Danville Military Institute, Danville, Va.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Rockbridge Company, held March 7, at Glasgow, the proposition made by a syndicate of Boston capitalists to put half a million dollars in Glasgow was accepted. This action on the part of the Rockbridge Company was taken in consequence of its having been officially notified that on account of the money market, the English syndicate could not comply with their contract. The company will issue stock for the payment of twenty-five thousand dollars made by the English.

Italians for the R. & S.

The crowd of Italians, who have been laying over for several days at Henry Bachrach's on Railroad avenue, started out yesterday on a journey down the Roanoke and Southern, where they will be employed. They looked pretty tough, and chose rather disagreeable weather for their journey. Large packs were carried and all went on the "gravel train."
